Committee to Defend the President Launches $1 Million Ad Campaign in Arizona

Pro-Trump PAC slams Joe Biden for his reluctance to condemn Left's recent violence

Alexandria, VA — Today, the Committee to Defend the President—one of America's largest pro-Trump super PACs—launched a $1 million advertising campaign in Arizona, criticizing Joe Biden and his Democratic endorsers for being reluctant to condemn the rioting and looting of recent months. The new ad campaign, titled “Joe Biden’s America,” blasts Biden’s failure to denounce Black Lives Matter and leaves viewers with one question: “How long do you think you’ll be safe in Joe Biden’s America?”

The Committee will spend more than $1 million to air the ad statewide on Arizona’s cable and broadcast networks. This is in addition to a $90,000 digital and CTV spend that will target swing voters and suburban women in the state.

“Even as rioters and looters destroy our country in the name of social justice, Democrats like Joe Biden remain reluctant to denounce them,” said Committee chairman Ted Harvey. “At the Democratic National Convention, not a single speaker even mentioned the violence ravaging our communities. Arizonans need to understand that there is only one law and order candidate in 2020: President Trump. Only he will take on the liberal mob and look after the interests of law-abiding citizens.”
